DETAILED ROUTES

-  Day 1: Individual arrival in Strasbourg
Check-in at the hotel in the late afternoon. Take some time to explore the wonderful capital of Alsace: don't miss the cathedral and the charming Quartier de La Petite France.
-  Day 2: Strasbourg - Mutzig
(approx. 28 km, elevation gain 40 m)
On this first stage, you'll cross the historic center of Strasbourg, notable for its typically Alsatian architecture. Then, leaving the city behind, you'll cycle along a charming canal that takes you a bit closer to the nearby Vosges mountain range, passing through some of the famous Alsace vineyards. The greenway will lead you to Mutzig, passing through superb typical villages of the region.
-  Day 3: Mutzig - Andlau
(approx. 25 km, elevation gain 320 m)
Today, you'll truly enter the heart of the Alsace vineyards. A mix of villages and countryside, the route is so pleasant that even the steeper parts don't seem too bad... and after the effort, you'll be rewarded with an exceptional view of the plain stretching out below! Obernai is a town worth visiting. The birthplace of Saint Odilia, the patron saint of Alsace, it is a medieval town with classified ramparts and simply superb half-timbered monuments. Along today's route, there are many scenic viewpoints where you can stop for a break, perhaps to take a few photos of the beautiful countryside surrounding you.
-  Day 4: Andlau - Sélestat
(approx. 21 km, elevation gain 85 m)
Today, you'll soon find yourself among the vineyards, cycling along winding country roads and passing through some of the charming typical villages of Alsace. Why not stop at one of the wineries you'll encounter along the way and taste some of the local products and wines (of course, in moderation)?
-  Day 5: Sélestat - Ribeauvillé
(approx. 16 km, total elevation gain 100 m)
This morning, you will head to the Sélestat station to take the shuttle service that will take you to Château du Haut Koenigsbourg, a stunning fortress perched on a rocky spur at 800 meters. From up there, you'll enjoy breathtaking views of the Alsace plain, the ridges and valleys of the Ballons des Vosges, and even the distant Black Forest in Germany. There's also the opportunity to visit the extraordinary Montagne des Singes (200 macaques in the wild!) or the Volerie des Aigles ("Eagle Flight") on the way back to Sélestat. In the afternoon, a short bike ride will take you at a leisurely pace, through vineyards and colorful Alsatian villages, across the countryside to Ribeauvillé. Bergheim, surrounded by 14th-century walls, is definitely worth a visit.
-  Day 6: Ribeauvillé - Colmar
(approx. 20 km, total elevation gain 210 m)
Leaving Ribeauvillé, you'll need to put in a bit of effort to climb up to the vineyards. From there, you can enjoy a beautiful view of the Alsace plain, descend to NaturOparC near the village of Hunawihr (dedicated to the conservation of endangered species), and visit charming villages such as Riquewihr and Kaysersberg. The road to Colmar passes through countryside dotted with orchards. Once you arrive, you'll experience the unique atmosphere of this superb Alsatian city: half-timbered houses, cobbled streets, charming canals, and excellent
